Project Description

When it comes to creating a welcoming experience for patients, clinicians, and staff, one of the most important points of contact is the registration desk. To create an agile, attractive desk for a medical office building operated by Kaiser Permanente in Tracy, CA, we focused on details that would make the desk a centerpiece that's designed for change.

Process

Previously, we designed first impression stations for Kaiser medical centers in the San Joaquin Valley. Given the success of that work, our dealer partner brought us in again. We quickly created a quote based on the plans, built and shipped the product, and offered installation assistance.

Solution

The client wanted an easy-to-adapt modular solution that would achieve a warm, welcoming aesthetic in their reception area. The plans the dealer designer provided called for an intricate linear Corian pattern that required extremely precise fabrication. To achieve this, we mitered the joints perfectly to achieve the desired waterfall look.

While the desk's exterior showcases the beauty of custom fabrication, the interior of the desk is still modular. That means it will be easy for the client to make changes to interior features in the future. More so, the desk meets the high-capacity power and data demands of a busy medical center. This versatile design helps staff do their jobs more efficiently, provides patients a more pleasant registration experience, and allows the medical center to better manage its assets as needs change over time.

Materials Used: Linear Corian

Our agile manufacturing process means we can work with any material you choose.

StudioCraft's talented and versatile craftsmen worked with Silver Linear Corian, which required precision in its fabrication.
